Drama

1. With reference to at least two plays you have studied, compare the role of action, or lack of action, in delivering the meaning of the works.

2. In what ways can the dénouement (the events after the climax of a play) be used to draw together the different threads of the play in order to enhance our understanding? Compare at least two plays you have studied.

3. With reference to at least two plays you have studied, explore how the playwrights’ use of contrasting characters contributes to the impact of the plays.

Poetry

4. A poet’s use of imagery may involve any of the senses, not just the visual. With reference to works by at least two poets you have studied, discuss the use and effects of non-visual imagery.

5. Compare works by at least two poets you have studied where the use of voice, or voices, produces particular effects on the reader.

6. How do poets make use of detail to present a realistic or unrealistic representation of the world? Refer to works by at least two poets you have studied.

Prose: novel and short story

7. Writers must select events and choose a sequence for their presentation. Compare how at least two writers you have studied choose and arrange events, and consider in what ways this affects our understanding of the texts as a whole.

8. Referring to works by at least two writers you have studied, compare the means by which writers establish mood and atmosphere.

9. What techniques of characterization do writers use to make what the reader might think of as unpleasant people acceptable, or at least understandable? Compare these techniques and their effects in the works of at least two writers you have studied.
Prose other than fiction

10. Compare the ways in which at least two writers you have studied use descriptive techniques to evoke a particular sense of place.

11. Compare the ways in which at least two writers you have studied have made use of anecdotes and/or analogies to achieve their purposes.

12. Some writers aim to present an objective view of their material whereas others openly resort to persuasive techniques. Compare the works of at least two writers you have studied in relation to this statement and show how successfully they achieve their aims.
